LONDON.

A Letter from the Chief Mate of the Francis, of 18 Carriage Guns, ſix Pounders, Capt. Onſlow, from Liverpool to Africa, dated Iſland of Teneriffe, April 17, 1760.

"I NEED not doubt your being ſurprized at this unwelcome News of the Ship Francis being wrecked, on the 21ſt of March, on the Iſland of Fortaventura, one of the Canary Iſlands, and 23 of our People loſt.

"That Day we had a good Obſervation, in the Latitude of 29 Degrees and 28 Minutes N. and Longitude of 20 Degrees and 40 Min. W. from the Meredian of London, by my Account; but, although I reckoned to be to the Weſtward, I was curious enough to get my Draught of the Coaſt, and at that Time the Captain came, and aſked me, if I had the American Pilot, my Anſwer was, no; he then called me into the Cabbin, and ſhewed me his Draught; at the ſame Time he gave me a ſtrict charge to have a good Look-out kept that Night; I then went on Deck: The Captain called down Mr. Hull (ſecond Mate) and alſo ſhewed him the Draught, and bid him to have a good Look-out kept that Night, for tho' we reckoned to be to the Weſtward of the Iſlands, yet we might be deceived: Mr. Hull anſwered, There ſhall; then went on Deck. The Captain, at or about Five o'Clock, ordered the Spritſail to be handed, which was done; then we had a pleaſant Breeze at N. E. the Ship going eight Knots, and having been going 7 and a ½ and 8 Knots for two or three Days before. At Eight o'Clock I went to Bed, Mr. Hull having the Watch on Deck; and about Eleven in the Night was awaked by Mr. Hull, calling to the Captain, Here is the Land on our Larboard Bow; on that I got out of Bed as faſt as I could; but before I could get out, the Ship ſtruck; then the Captain was cloſe at my Back, and we both run on Deck together——but alas too late! for at that Time the Ship was cloſe in the Breakers, and not a Piſtol-ſhot from the dry Rocks; and was laid down almoſt on her Beam-ends; then Orders were given to cut away the Maſts, which was done in four or five Minutes, and the Lee Guns were hove over-board as many as we could come at; but ſhe lying ſo low, moſt of them were under Water, ſo that we could not come at them. In that Condition ſhe lay, and all Hands got on her Broadſide; but the Breakers made ſo common a Road over us, that it was with the greateſt Difficulty that we held ourſelves. About Three o'Clock ſhe broke in two or three, and only the Larboard Quarter and Quarter Deck were left together, and that was breaking up by little and little, ſo that there was but a few Boards of the Quarter Deck left, when the Deck parted from the Quarter. At that Time I believe there were about fifty People on the Deck when it parted and drove in towards the Shore. I was ſoon after waſhed over-board, and was over for ſome Time ſtruggling for Life, but how long I cannot tell: I got on the few Boards of the Deck that were left together, and all the People I could then ſee, ſtood holding themſelves by the Wheel, and did not appear to exceed 25 in Number; I joined them; and in a ſhort Time the Breakers drove us aſhore, where moſt of us that were left got on the Land, but with great Difficulty; it was then about Four o'Clock.

"At Day-light, when we gathered together, we found our 58 Men reduced to 35, and amongſt thoſe that ſuffered were my two poor Brothers, which gave me greater Concern than all that had happened; and to make our Misfortune more complete, we found that we were on a deſolate Part of the Iſland, and only three Men that were Shepherds near us, one of whom went with the Captain and Doctor as a Guide to the Governor's Houſe, which was 60 or 70 Miles off over the Mountains, and nothing but hard Rocks; they carried their Proviſions on their Backs, which was Bread that had drove aſhore from the Wreck, all ſoft with ſalt Water, raw ſalt Beef, and ſalt Water to drink, and in the Night lay on the hard Rocks, with nothing to cover them but a Shirt and a Waiſtcoat on their Backs. They arrived the ſecond Day in the Evening: The Captain received a Contuſion in his Leg amongſt the Rocks, and as ſoon as he got to the Governor's he was ſeized with a Fever, which rendered him inſenſible of Pain for two or three Days. A Schooner was hired to carry us to this Iſland (Teneriffe) where we arrived the 4th Inſtant. The Goods that were ſaved are but a ſmall Quantity, and given into the Engliſh Conſul's Hands, to diſpoſe of for the Benefit of the Under-writers.

"This Misfortune happened for Want of a Look-out; the People all tell us, that Mr. Hull (one of the Perſons loſt) was aſleep on the Deck when the Helmſman called out Land a Head; he then went forward, and afterwards came aft, and called the Captain (as I mentioned before) but then the Ship was with her Stem on the Rocks.

NATHAN DICKINSON."

Yeſterday an Engliſh Flag of Truce returned hither from Martinico, and by her we learn, that the Captures made by the Enemy, have not, for ſome Time paſt, been ſo numerous as heretofore. The French gave out, that two Ships of the Line, and four Frigates, were arrived from France; but a Dutchman, who had been at Fort-Royal, declared, there were only two Frigates, and two Store Ships there. The Store Ships brought out ſome diſmounted Dragoons.

PORTSMOUTH (in New-Hampshire) Sept. 12.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Bumbury (who sailed from this Port last June) dated at St. Croix, August 2, 1760.

"I take this Opportunity (by the Way of New-London) to acquaint you of my Misfortune, being taken in the Snow General Townshend, the 10th of July, by a French Frigate, bound to Bourdeaux, in the Latitude 31 : 23 N. and Longitude of 57 Degrees West: They took out several small Stores, and threw off all the Hoops and Shingles from Deck, took out 40 Quintals of Fish, and shot one Horse; and about four Hours after took all my Hands on board the Snow, and sent a Prize Master and five Frenchmen on board us, with Orders to proceed to Martinico. In two Days after we parted from the Frigate, the Prize Master bore away for St. Croix, and told me his Reason for so doing, was, that he was afraid of our Frigates that were cruizing off Martinico. On the 22d of the same Month we made the Land, about Seven o'Clock in the Evening, which the Prize Master took to be the Island of Anigada; at Twelve o'Clock it bore W. by N. two Leagues: I then told the Prize Master, unless he made more Sail, we should not get into St. Croix next Day, on which he immediately ordered two of his Men up forward, and two abaft, to let a Reef out of the Topsails. I at that Time gave Mr. Meserve a Hint of my Design, and desired him to assist them, and take the Helm, while the Prize Master and the other Frenchmen went forward to hoist the Fore-top-sail: I took this Opportunity to go aft, where, with a Spike Nail, I made three Attempts before I broke open the Prize Master's Chest, which lay on the Larboard Side of the Quarter Deck; out of which I took all the Arms, which were only one Pair of small Pocket Pistols, that had no Bullets for them, and one Pair of large Pistols, one of which was loaded; I directly loaded the other, and new primed them both; I then went down into the Cabbin, and after taking twelve Cartridges out of the Box, hove the rest overboard, and went up on the Quarter Deck, close to the Barricado, where I found the Prize Master and three of his Men coming aft to hoist the Main-top-sail; I told them not to advance, or make any Resistance, if they did I would immediately blow their Brains out; telling them in the Main-top, not to come down for I would do the same to them, upon which, advancing upon them, they retreated off the Lumber, before the Windlass: I then ordered Mr. Meserve to steer in for the Land, which appeared to be the Virgin Guard, though I told the Frenchmen it was Antigua, and that if they behaved well they should not go to Goal: I ordered them to haul up the Fore-sail, and hoist the Boat out, and directed the Prize Master, his Mate, and another Frenchman, to go into the Boat; and made the others go aft, and take their Officer's Chest, and their own Things, into the Boat; then called those down out of the Main-top, and ordered them in the Boat, which I soon cast off, bidding them to follow me: We then wore the Snow, and made all the Sail we possibly could for St. Croix, where we arrived safe in the Afternoon of the 23d of July."

NEW-YORK, September 25.

Camp before Montreal, Sept. 9, 1760.

"I have the Pleasure to tell you that all Canada is subjected to the King of Great-Britain. Yesterday the Capitulation was signed, and our Troops took Possession of the Town; there are many Articles, which as I have not seen, I cannot tell you, the material ones are, the Inhabitants to enjoy their Property and Religion, on taking the Oath of Fidelity to his Majesty, and becoming good Subjects, which they in general seem very free to do. The Right of nominating a Bishop to be in the King of England, though strongly insisted on to be the Right of the French King. The Regular Troops (of which there are 8 Battalions) to be Prisoners of War, and to bind themselves not to serve against his Majesty, nor his Allies, during the War. This severe Article, and what they look upon as an Indignity, they strove hard to ward off, but could not; and were obliged to comply, though the Officers say to their Ruin; and were told by the General, that the barbarous and inhuman Manner in which they had prosecuted the War, was the Reason such Terms, which military Men call hard, were imposed on them. We have not had a Gun fired at us since entering the Country. The Militia in general refused to fight, and the General forbid any Depredations on them, so that little Harm has been done them by the Army, not even by the Savages, not more than would have been done by such an Army in our own Country: I entirely like such a Regulation, though I think it much better Treatment than they deserve, or had Reason to expect. Such a glorious Conquest with so little Loss is almost unparalelled; I think our military Toils in America are now finished, for a Time at least. I have not been in Town yet, there being an Order, that no Person go in till the Affairs of the Stores, Magazines, &c. are settled. I cannot yet give you an Account of the Town, of the Ladies, the Nuns, &c. all which I defer till I may have the Pleasure of seeing you. This happy Event that puts the finishing Stroke to our Conquests in America, happened on the same Day of the Month and Week as that which was the first important favourable Action of the War in America, viz. that with Mr. Dieskau, at Lake-George, and makes it a memorable Day."

Sept. 29. Since our last arrived here from Albany, the Prisoners that were taken at Fort-Levi, on Isle-Royale, in the River St. Lawrence, with their Commander, Monsr. Pouchet.

We hear that General Amherst set out for Quebec, a few Days after the Surrender of Montreal, in order to view that Place.

From Albany we learn, that after the City of Montreal had surrendered, upwards of 300 Ladies of Distinction, implored the Protection of General Amherst, who was pleased to order proper Care to be taken of them, and gave them all their Jewels, Rings, &c.

PHILADELPHIA, October 2.

By Captain Cobourn, from St. Christophers, there is Advice, that on the 30th of August they had a violent Gale of Wind there, in which some Vessels were drove ashore: And that at Montserrat a Ship belonging to London, with 400 Hogsheads of Sugar on board, and a Bermudian Sloop, were also drove ashore; the first said to be intirely lost.

From Montreal we learn, that Monsieur Vaudreuille, late Governor, and Commander in Chief of Canada, with all the regular Troops, the Merchants and Citizens of Montreal, and all Persons belonging to Old France, were to be sent home immediately: And that the Peasants, born in Canada, and having Possession of Lands, are to remain, on their taking the Oaths of Fidelity, but not to trade with the Indians on Pain of Death.
